DVD and Blu-ray production

If your goal is selling physical copies at conventions, on your website, or through retailers, these companies are commonly used:

- Kunaki — One of the cheapest print-on-demand DVD/Blu-ray services.
- Disc Makers — Professional DVD and Blu-ray manufacturing.
- Amazon CreateSpace (archived) alternatives via Amazon sellers — For fulfillment through Amazon.

A practical budget

For a first indie sci-fi or horror feature, a realistic approach might be:

- DCP creation: $1,500
- Poster and trailer: $1,000
- FilmHub or similar aggregator: $0–$2,000
- DVD authoring and initial manufacturing: $500–$2,000
- Social media advertising: $2,000–$5,000
- Film festival submissions: $1,000–$3,000

Total: about $5,000–$12,000 for a professional launch without trying to secure a nationwide theatrical release.

Given the current market, many experienced filmmakers recommend building an audience through festivals, digital platforms, and direct sales first, then pursuing limited theatrical screenings in select cities if there is demonstrated demand. This often offers a better return on investment than paying for a broad theatrical release.
